

Jane Harley (nee Fry) qualified as a speech and language therapist in 1984 in New Zealand and has worked at the Michael Palin Centre since 1993. She completed a Post-graduate Diploma in Cognitive Therapy at the Oxford Cognitive Therapy Centre in 1998 and gained an MSc in Psychological Counselling at City University in 2002. Jane works with clients of all ages and contributes to the teaching and research programme at the Centre. She has made particular contribution to the development of clinical work, teaching and research in respect to therapy with young people and the use of CBT in therapy with people who stammer. Jane has contributed to several publications and most recently has authored a chapter describing the use of CBT in therapy, in Stammering from the Inside (Cheasman, et al, (eds.) 2013). Jane has completed introductory training in Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT) and has an interest in the use of ACT and Mindfulness Based Cognitive Therapy with people who stammer. Jane co-ordinates the provision of therapy for adults who stammer at the Michael Palin Centre.
